

To whom it may concern,

I'm happy to recommend Danil Klushnik, who worked with us at Acquire.com as a Frontend Engineer.

Danil was an excellent frontend engineer who consistently delivered high-quality, well-thought-out work. He had a strong eye for detail, cared deeply about user experience, and took pride in building interfaces that were both clean and reliable.

He worked closely with product and design, translated ideas into polished execution, and improved the frontend codebase over time rather than just shipping quick fixes. In a fast-moving startup environment, Danil was someone we could trust to move quickly without sacrificing quality.

Beyond his technical skills, Danil was dependable, thoughtful, and easy to work with. He communicated clearly, took feedback well, and showed real ownership over his work. He made the product better and made the team stronger.

I'd strongly recommend Danil for any frontend engineering role. Any team would be lucky to have him.

If you'd like additional context, feel free to reach out.
